Chapter 1 by -

Windows shattered from skyscrapers, sprinkling specks of glass upon sleeping cities.

Fields suffocated as water seeped through the ground, making hills into waterfalls and streets into rivers.

Trees burst into flames which surged to the Heavens, like pillars of fire.

Smoke engulfed the blackening sky, blinding all but one...

Yes, the world became one natural disaster - was it Nature?

Yes, the people grew incapable and helpless, or were they being helped?

From one simple miracle the universe crumbled. From the hand of one man global chaos ensued.

No, not chaos to this god. It was the taming of a world. It was the reaping of mankind. It was the

Chapter 2 by

Man was weak. They would cling to their meagre individual lives, which were just memories that meant too much. Man would avoid death, forgetting that they were all the same, one way or another. Man would gather his experiences and memories and create an 'independence'. And with that independence, man would become greedy, careless, stupid. Man would destroy everything in it's path - the beauty of nature would give way to Man's ugly creations, animals would give way to Man's eternal need for space, the universe seemed to give way to Man's arrogant title of 'dominance' and 'superiority'!

Man was weak.

And Alektos saw that.

Man was destroying everything.

And Alektos would fix that.

Chapter 3 by Coral13

Alektos knew that there was one sure way to fix this world wide natural disaster, and that was to go to the man, no, the God himself, who ensued the 'taming' of the world. There was only two approaches to take with this so called God, and that was to either make him see the detrimental side effects of his philosophies, even his teachings that man has made their own, or, Alektos would make him 'disappear'.

Neither approach would be easy, but who else had access to such a higher being in society? No one. Alektos was the only one who get close, the only one who can save the world. So, being the youngest brother, simply being known as the protegee was no easy feat, and it certainly caused a rift to expand between the brothers.

Despite the rift that grew between them, Alektos knew that the only way to appeal to his brother was to show him, yet the world as well, that by living his life as mankind should live, they are in fact saving themselves and their world. However, stepping away from the teachings, looking away from how society expected them to live, and thus, proving the benefits of such actions, would be the best way, or would it?

perfection, etc., they have also become obsessed with immortality.

Then, creating, yet maintaining, an individuality is the second rule. So, don't fall into the norm of how the society expects each other to look, behave, talk, etc.

And lastly, respect nature, which means only take what is needed to survive, but in return, give back to nature.

Alektos knew without a doubt that he would be seen as weak by majority of society. He knew that if he could hold out, it would not only change his life, but he would slowly make a difference in each person, in each community that he interacted with, which would ultimately ease the blackened heart of his elder brother who takes the claim of 'God'!

So, rather than approaching his elder brother with this idea, he decided to just act upon his decisions, and know that his brother would be watching. Alektos also knew that there would be other forces at work to stop him from success, but regardless, he would succeed. He must succeed.
